Presented by:

Rebecca C. Morgan, Boston Asset Management Chair in Elder Law and Director, Center for Excellence in Elder Law, Stetson University College of Law

With the aging of the Baby Boomers, much attention is given to aging issues and the impact that this group of Americans will have on society, on government programs and our culture. The sheer number of Baby Boomers directs us to think about the impact they will have on the Elder Law practice. That, along with the changes in technology, changes to government programs and the economy, creates a perfect time to think about the future of Elder Law.

The Past, Present and Future of Elder Law Practice

- Baby Boomers
- Budget Cuts
- Longevity
- Cultural Diversity
- Multiple Generations
- Clients' Needs Change

Ethical Considerations Covered:

- Who is Your Client? ... Make it Clear to Everyone Involved
- Does Your Client Have Capacity?
- Who is in Charge?
- Keep Client Confidences
- Avoid Conflicts of Interest
